Developing a customer service mindset

Treat every individual you interact with as your customer

- Communicate effectively Responsiveness
- Actively listen and provide feedback
- Give the credit and take the blame
- Pick your battles
- Be goal-oriented in everything you do
  - e.g., meetings, partnerships, projects, deadlines, etc.

• Lead by example of your staff decisions bad manager

Understanding the importance of customer service in leadership

- Your greatest resource is your staff
- Your most important job as a leader is the development
- Be inclusive in decision-making, but know when to make
- Being the subject of a "complaint" does not make you a

Fostering your organization's customer service culture

 Communicating customer service orientation expectations

• Open door policy

- Transparency minimizes conflict
- An open door policy is not enough to encourage employees' input
- Implement initiatives that foster engagement, visibility, and collaboration
  - Lunch & Learns
  - Listening tours

Listening Tours

In my roles, this is the best advice I received:

- Never let emotions guide your decisions
- Remember previous supervisors
- Be introspective
- Have an outlet and use it
- Have a goal for meetings and communications
- Treat people individually
- Balance in all things in life
- Perspective, perspective, perspective

Psychological Safety

Transform your leadership style by fostering "psychological safety"

Psychological Safety is a shared belief held by members of a team that it's OK to take risks, to express their ideas and concerns, to speak up with questions, and to admit mistakes — all without fear of negative consequences.

A research study known as Project Aristotle by Amy Edmondson at Google, aimed to understand the factors that impacted team effectiveness across Google. The project concluded that who was on a team mattered less than how the team worked together. And the most important factor was psychological safety.

How can psychological safety impact customer service orientation?

- Problem solving- it can foster a culture of continuous learning and improvement.
- Team cohesion- Better communication, team is not afraid to speak up and share ideas.
- Accountability- Employees are more likely to feel comfortable admitting mistakes and correcting them.

How can you foster psychological safety as a leader?

Facilitate everyone in your team speaking up	Establish norms for how mistakes are handled	Create space for new and creative ideas
Provide regular feedback	Be Inclusive in decision- making	Prioritize team success over individual success
Communicate clear expectations	Elevate the importance of learning and training	Praise individuals for raising concerns/ admitting mistakes

Implementing employee feedback

- Federal Employee Viewpoint Survey
  - Important, BUT ... just a number
